

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Boston Symphony Hall / Boston, MA
Friday, 24 April 2020 / 8:00 pm

Andris Nelsons, conductor

Andris Nelsons leads Mahler's Ninth Symphony, the work with which he made his debut with the orchestra in 2011, at Carnegie Hall. The composer's last completed work, the Ninth is a stunningly moving piece that has been interpreted as a meditation on death. On the boundary between the Romantic and the modern eras, it is doubtless one of the most beautiful symphonies in the literature.

Symphony no. 9

mahler

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Boston Symphony Hall / Boston, MA
Friday, 24 April 2020 / 8:00 pm

Andris Nelsons, conductor

Andris Nelsons leads Mahler's Ninth Symphony, the work with which he made his debut with the orchestra in 2011, at Carnegie Hall. The composer's last completed work, the Ninth is a stunningly moving piece that has been interpreted as a meditation on death. On the boundary between the Romantic and the modern eras, it is doubtless one of the most beautiful symphonies in the literature.

symphony no. 9

mahler

Boston Symphony Orchestra Andris Nelsons, conductor

Boston Symphony Hall / Boston, MA
Friday, 24 April 2020 / 8:00 pm

Andris Nelsons leads Mahler's Ninth Symphony, the work with which he made his debut with the orchestra in 2011, at Carnegie Hall. The composer's last completed work, the Ninth is a stunningly moving piece that has been interpreted as a meditation on death. On the boundary between the Romantic and the modern eras, it is doubtless one of the most beautiful symphonies in the literature.

symphony no. 9
mahler

Boston Symphony Orchestra Andris Nelsons, conductor

Boston Symphony Hall / Boston, MA
Friday, 24 April 2020 / 8:00 pm

Andris Nelsons leads Mahler's Ninth Symphony, the work with which he made his debut with the orchestra in 2011, at Carnegie Hall. The composer's last completed work, the Ninth is a stunningly moving piece that has been interpreted as a meditation on death. On the boundary between the Romantic and the modern eras, it is doubtless one of the most beautiful symphonies in the literature.

symphony no. 9
mahler

Boston Symphony Orchestra Andris Nelsons, conductor

Boston Symphony Hall / Boston, MA
Friday, 24 April 2020 / 8:00 pm

Andris Nelsons leads Mahler's Ninth Symphony, the work with which he made his debut with the orchestra in 2011, at Carnegie Hall. The composer's last completed work, the Ninth is a stunningly moving piece that has been interpreted as a meditation on death. On the boundary between the Romantic and the modern eras, it is doubtless one of the most beautiful symphonies in the literature.

symphony no. 9
mahler

symphony no. 9
mahler

Boston Symphony Orchestra Andris Nelsons, conductor

Boston Symphony Hall / Boston, MA
Friday, 24 April 2020 / 8:00 pm

Andris Nelsons leads Mahler's Ninth Symphony, the work with which he made his debut with the orchestra in 2011, at Carnegie Hall. The composer's last completed work, the Ninth is a stunningly moving piece that has been interpreted as a meditation on death. On the boundary between the Romantic and the modern eras, it is doubtless one of the most beautiful symphonies in the literature.

symphony no. 9 mahler

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Boston Symphony Hall / Boston, MA

Friday, 24 April 2020 / 8:00 pm

Andris Nelsons, conductor

Andris Nelsons leads Mahler's Ninth Symphony, the work with which he made his debut with the orchestra in 2011, at Carnegie Hall. The composer's last completed work, the Ninth is a stunningly moving piece that has been interpreted as a meditation on death. On the boundary between the Romantic and the modern eras, it is doubtless one of the most beautiful symphonies in the literature.

The background of the poster features high-contrast black silhouettes of musicians and a conductor against a light, cloudy sky. On the left, a conductor's profile is visible, facing right. In the center and right, the silhouettes of musicians are shown, including one holding a double bass. The overall mood is dramatic and artistic.

symphony no. 9 mahler

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Boston Symphony Hall / Boston, MA
Friday, 24 April 2020 / 8:00 pm

Andris Nelsons, conductor

Andris Nelsons leads Mahler's Ninth Symphony, the work with which he made his debut with the orchestra in 2011, at Carnegie Hall. The composer's last completed work, the Ninth is a stunningly moving piece that has been interpreted as a meditation on death. On the boundary between the Romantic and the modern eras, it is doubtless one of the most beautiful symphonies in the literature.